

Names

MARK SHANAHAN & MEREDITH GOLDSTEIN

SOUTHERN REEL

Steven Tyler (left) backstage with Zac Brown at Fenway Park.

Tyler joins the Zac Brown Band at Fenway

Aerosmith screamer Steven Tyler walked his way right onto the stage at Fenway Park Sunday night, joining the Zac Brown Band on a couple of Aerosmith classics: "Sweet Emotion" and "Walk This Way."

Before launching into the latter of the two songs, Tyler turned to Brown and said, "Gee, you let me think, what else could we do — something the [Boston] Globe maybe could write about?"

Aerosmith performed at Fenway in 2010, but it was Zac Brown who made history this weekend, becoming the first act to sell 105,000 tickets during their three-night run at the ballpark.

Tyler wasn't the only special guest Sunday. The Berklee Reverence Gospel Choir, directed by Dennis Montgomery III, joined Brown and his band on all three nights. The choir, which includes Montgomery singing falsetto, backed ZBB on "Remedy," "I'll Be Your Man," and a cover of "Let It Be." Montgomery, who's been directing the choir for 25 years, told us afterward he had two members of the Zac Brown Band as students at Berklee — Clay Cook and Matt Mangano — and a third student of his — Maureen Murphy — returned to perform with the choir at the Fenway shows.

"I felt like a proud papa," Montgomery said, admitting he'd never been to Fenway before despite living in Boston since 1983. "What I really loved about it was that it was almost as if my past students never left my classroom, the musical chemistry was so great."

Brown played Neil Diamond's "Sweet Caroline" on Friday, and a rendition of the Dropkick Murphys' "I'm Shipping You to Boston" Saturday. So Tyler's appearance Sunday closed out a weekend of Boston-inspired music.

Murray says what's wrong with Red Sox

It's well known that actor Bill Murray loves baseball. The Chicago native is a diehard Cubs fan. (Earlier this summer, he may have been only half-joking when he called the Cubs' hated rivals, the St. Louis Cardinals, "Satan's messengers on earth.") Not as well known is Murray's ownership stake in the Martha's Vineyard Sharks, a collegiate summer baseball team that plays its home games at the Martha's Vineyard Regional High School in Oak Bluffs. Sunday, Murray threw out the first pitch at the Sharks's game and chatted briefly with a reporter from the Cape Cod Times, who asked the "Lost in Translation" star what's wrong with the Red Sox. "You can't win every year," replied Murray. "You guys used to be such good losers and now you're unbearable just because you won a couple times. Always such gracious losers and now just terrible winners. That's what I think the Red Sox problem is." He was kidding (we think). In throwing out the first pitch, Murray actually resembled one of the Sox starters, air-mailing it to the backstop.

STEVEN SENNE/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Obama returns to links on Vineyard

It was back onto the golf course for President Obama Monday on Martha's Vineyard. Over the weekend, Obama played with a group that included actor-comedian Larry David. The commander-in-chief hit the links Monday at Vineyard Golf Club in Edgartown, joined by World Bank president Jim Yong Kim, private equity mogul Glen Hutchins, and frequent golfing companion Cyrus Walker. The first family arrived on the island Friday and will stay at their oceanside rental in Chilmark until Aug. 23. Obama and his wife, Michelle, ventured out for dinner Sunday night to State Road in West Tisbury.

Nantucket hospital benefit a big draw

Former "Meet the Press" host David Gregory was host of a Boston Pops benefit for Nantucket Cottage Hospital on the island. The audience on Jetties Beach included Red Sox chairman Tom Werner, Red Sox (and Boston Globe) owner John Henry and wife Linda, Patriots owner Robert Kraft, Mass General Hospital president Peter Slavin, and former NBC Universal chairman Bob Wright.

KRIS KINSLEY HANCOCK

David Gregory and his wife, Beth Wilkinson, on Nantucket.

'Jackass' star arrested

"Jackass" star Steve-O was arrested after climbing a crane in Hollywood to protest SeaWorld and drawing dozens of emergency responders to a construction site. Stephen Glover (inset) scrambled up a crane at least 100 feet high on Sunset Boulevard, inflating a large killer whale balloon emblazoned with "SeaWorld Sucks" and lighting fire. Glover works when he reached the top Sunday night. Los Angeles police Lieutenant Michael Ling said. Glover, known for his outlandish stunts in the "Jackass" TV show and movies, later climbed down and was taken into custody. Because the first responders were not sure whether he needed to be rescued, five ambulances, a helicopter, and

PATRIOT PICS/FAMEFLYNET PICTURES

McCarthy and husband step out

On a break from filming "Ghostbusters," Melissa McCarthy was out and about over the weekend. McCarthy, who's costarring with Kristen Wig, Kate McKinnon, and Leslie Jones in director Paul Feig's reboot, took a stroll around Beacon Hill and through the Public Garden with her husband, Ben Falcone. McCarthy, of course, is plenty familiar with Boston because she and Sandra Bullock shot "The Heat" — also directed by Feig — here in 2012. Falcone is an actor-writer whose directorial debut, "Tammy," starred McCarthy.

DAN CUTRONA

From left: Maury Povich, Connie Chung, Keith Lockhart, Charlie Gibson, Mike Dukakis, and Kitty Dukakis at Pops by the Sea.

Famous faces on the Cape

Boston Pops baton twirler Keith Lockhart was joined by special guests at the 30th annual Pops by the Sea Concert on the Hyannis Village Green over the weekend. TV personalities Connie Chung and husband Maury Povich, and former "Good Morning America" host Charlie Gibson lent their voices to "The Dream Lives On: A Portrait of the Kennedy Brothers," and also conducted a John Philip Sousa march. Among those enjoying the show were former governor Mike Dukakis and wife Kitty. ... Because all work and no play makes Rob Gronkowski a dull boy, the hard-partying Patriots tight end hit Foxwoods over the weekend, getting his groove on at Liquid Sundays, a Las Vegas-style pool party. As always, Gronk did a little dancing while also chatting up the crowd and posing for pictures. ... There were some familiar faces at the Willowbend Country Club in Mashpee. Governor Charlie Baker, Kraft Group president Jonathan Kraft, philanthropist David Mugar, and Outside the Box founder Ted Cutler all dined at David Southworth's club over the weekend. (Baker also golfed with some of his GOP pals.)

GEORGE T. MARSHALL

Julia Louis-Dreyfus with her father, William, and husband Brad Hall

Louis-Dreyfus, husband, and dad at RIIFF

Actress Julia Louis-Dreyfus and her husband, Brad Hall, were at the Rhode Island International Film Festival over the weekend to screen the movie they made together about her father. Called "Generosity of Eye," the documentary tells the surprising story of William Louis-Dreyfus's decision to sell his impressive art collection to help finance the Harlem Children's Zone, a non-profit that tries to lift families out of poverty in that neighborhood of Manhattan. William Louis-Dreyfus, 83, the former CEO of Louis-Dreyfus Energy Services, was at Sunday's screening in Metcalf Auditorium at RISD, and he joined the filmmakers on stage afterward. Julia Louis-Dreyfus, known for her roles on "Seinfeld" and "Veep," narrated the documentary, while Hall, a former "Saturday Night Live" cast member, directed.

Mallory Abreu, Globe correspondent, contributed. Read local celebrity news at www.bostonglobe.com/names. Names can be reached at names@globe.com or at 617-929-8253.

MORE CELEBRITY NEWS

'Four' flop proves costly

21st Century Fox may lose as much as $60 million on "Fantastic Four," the superhero reboot that flopped in theaters this weekend, according to FBR & Co. It was the first Marvel movie in three years not to open in first place, according to Rentrak. "Fantastic Four," directed by Josh Trank, opened on Aug. 7 and produced $25.7 million in US and Canadian ticket sales over the weekend. That compares with a $56.1 million opening weekend for the 2005 version, which went on to generate $154.7 million in its domestic theatrical run. Fox spent $120 million to make the latest "Fantastic Four," according to the studio. Fox has scheduled a sequel for June 2017. (AP)

Stern on Aniston wedding

Howard Stern has revealed details about the secret wedding between Jennifer Aniston and Justin Theroux, including that Jimmy Kimmel officiated. Stern was a guest at the Los Angeles ceremony last Wednesday that Aniston and Theroux disguised as a birthday bash for Theroux. Stern said on his radio show Monday that he knew beforehand that it was a wedding because the couple asked him to give a speech. But Stern said the affair was extremely secretive and that guests had to hand over their phones. He said Kimmel did "a beautiful job" officiating, and that Sia performed. Other guests, he said, included Ellen DeGeneres, Whitney Cummings, and Orlando Bloom. The marriage is the second for Aniston, who was divorced from Brad Pitt in 2005 after five years of marriage, and the first for Theroux. (AP)

Disparity

'Kendrick Lamar sings about LSD and he's cool. I do it and I'm a druggie whore.'

MILEY CYRUS complaining about sexism in the music business

